Pasadena Showcase House for the Arts 2016 Showcase Colors Accentuates this Year's Mission Style Estate

Each year, a new color palette is selected to reflect the latest design trends and accentuate the home's classic architecture and surrounding landscape. For the fifty-second Pasadena Showcase House of Design, visitors will experience a color scheme that is evident of the late Mission Revival style - soft, muted tones of dusty greens, classic blues and rosy pinks, punctuated with darker hues of gold, fawn and marine grey.

In order to maintain the estate's 1916 Mission Revival style while infusing a fresh take on the California lifestyle, the Showcase team consulted with their Interior Advisor, Joshua Cain of Saxony Design Build and Sara A. McLean, editor, color marketing manager, marketing at Dunn-Edwards Corporation. Through a partnership with Dunn-Edwards Paints, 16 colors were chosen as part of this year's palette, twelve of which were sourced from the new "Then, Now & Forever" collection.

"The colors are historically accurate from the Mission Revival period along with other architectural eras," said McLean. "This collection reflects on the past and future of color, making it easy to specify historic colors with complete accuracy."

Further building off the color selection, Cain infused the palette into fabrics and textiles. "We took great care to develop a fresh color scheme that not only pays homage to the house's elegantly refined architecture, but also reflects today's California lifestyle."

Showcase opens to the public April 17 to May 15, 2016. Tickets go on sale February 2016. Visit pasadenashowcase.org to purchase tickets or to get additional information about Pasadena Showcase House for the Arts.
